When I woke up this morning I didn't know that this day was anything special other than it would have been the 57 year 271 day that we have been under control. Right you don't know, but we have been under control by aliens, and yes I mean those from space, for almost 58 years and today they just left our planet. There been a lot of news about it and people have been talking, discussing and everything between about them leaving. People are uncertain if it is for good they left or if it is just temporary and no matter what should we be happy or sad they have left us. Let me start at the beginning, years ago, an amateur radio caught a weird signal, which was believed to a glitch but before anyone famous people could get the hang of it big spaceships where suddenly inside the earths atmosphere and because of the speed of their arrival we had no change to attack or anything. A few people here and there died but in the grand scheme it was like when you are walking in the nature and hit an ant without much notice and in the same way I would say life has been peaceful and they were acting like they were people coming form another country on holiday or something. People started to get less in mood for war and other type of violence so I guess they bought peace with them since we learned we was not alone in the universe and for me, I never felt so tiny in my entire life. Wait did you see that? It was a flash of some kind... did you hear that as well? That sounded like gunshots... wait what are you doing with that gun, we been at peac- Agh! you shoot me.
